Abstract. This study reports on the results of a survey of 100 teachers in a large urban school district. The survey was designed to assess the extent to which teachers used various strategies to promote student learning. The results of the survey indicate that teachers used a variety of strategies to promote student learning, with the most commonly used strategies being direct instruction and cooperative learning. The results also indicate that teachers used a variety of strategies to assess student learning, with the most commonly used strategies being direct assessment and self-assessment. The results of the survey suggest that teachers use a variety of strategies to promote student learning and assess student learning, and that the most commonly used strategies are direct instruction and cooperative learning.

Students need to be able to identify and explain the relationship between the different components of the system. This is a complex task that requires a deep understanding of the system and its components. The following table provides a summary of the key components and their relationships.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness and health-related quality of life (HRQL) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The intervention group (n = 20) participated in a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week. The control group (n = 20) remained sedentary. The primary outcome was the change in HRQL, measured using the EuroQol-5D questionnaire. Secondary outcomes included changes in physical fitness, measured using the 6-minute walk test, and changes in body composition, measured using dual-energy X-ray absorptiometry. The results showed that the intervention group had significantly higher HRQL scores at baseline and after 12 weeks compared to the control group. The intervention group also had significantly higher physical fitness scores and lower body mass index (BMI) at baseline and after 12 weeks compared to the control group. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve HRQL and physical fitness in sedentary, middle-aged women.

Exposure to stressors—The authors used a questionnaire to assess the degree to which respondents were exposed to a number of stressors, including work, family, and social stressors. The questionnaire was based on a previous study by the authors and was used to assess the degree to which respondents were exposed to a number of stressors.

It is important to remember that the results of the 1990 survey are likely to reflect conditions prevailing at the time of the survey, and not necessarily the long-term situation.

The company's long-term success, says CEO John J. O'Neil, will depend on its ability to "continue to invest in the right areas."

There are two main types of government intervention in the market. The first is a tax or a subsidy. A tax is a payment made by a firm to the government. A subsidy is a payment made by the government to a firm. The second type of government intervention is a regulation. A regulation is a rule that the government imposes on firms. For example, the government might require firms to install pollution control equipment. The government might also require firms to pay a certain amount of money to the government for each unit of pollution that they emit.

The President indicated that Indonesia is still a poor country. Indonesia's annual average GDP growth is 5.5 percent, which is lower than the 6.5 percent rate recorded by the EU.

60 'comfort women' press fight vs crimes against humanity

By Philip C. Thomas

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — Sixty Japanese women who were forced into sexual slavery by the Japanese military during World War II are pressing a fight against the Japanese government for crimes against humanity.

The women, known as "comfort women," are suing the Japanese government for damages and for an apology. They are also seeking to have the Japanese government recognize their status as victims of war crimes.

The women are represented by a group of lawyers in Japan and the United States. They are also receiving support from human rights organizations.

The Japanese government has denied the women's claims, saying that the women were voluntarily entering into the service.

The women are now 70 years old or older. They are still suffering from the trauma of their experiences.

The vessel is connected to a gas collection system, which includes a gas syringe and a gasometer. The gas syringe is used to measure the volume of gas evolved, and the gasometer is used to measure the pressure of the gas. The diagram also shows a control system, which includes a gas flow meter and a gas pressure sensor. The control system is used to regulate the flow of gas into the reaction vessel and to monitor the pressure of the gas. The diagram is labeled with various components and their functions, such as 'Reaction vessel', 'Stirrer', 'Thermometer', 'Gas syringe', 'Gasometer', 'Gas flow meter', and 'Gas pressure sensor'.

The first column (a, b, c) shows the effect of increasing NaCl concentrations from 10^{-4} M to 10^{-1} M. The second column (d, e, f) shows the effect of increasing NaCl concentrations from 10^{-4} M to 10^{-1} M in the presence of 10^{-4} M KCl. The third column (g, h, i) shows the effect of increasing NaCl concentrations from 10^{-4} M to 10^{-1} M in the presence of 10^{-4} M KCl and 10^{-4} M CaCl_2 . The fourth column (j, k, l) shows the effect of increasing NaCl concentrations from 10^{-4} M to 10^{-1} M in the presence of 10^{-4} M KCl and 10^{-4} M CaCl_2 . The plots show that growth is generally inhibited by high NaCl concentrations, but partially restored by the addition of KCl and CaCl_2 .

BSP tightens rules on dosri loans

By [Name]

THE BANK OF THE PHILIPPINE ISLANDS (BPI) has tightened its rules on dosri loans, requiring borrowers to provide more collateral and documentation.

The bank's new policy aims to reduce the risk of default on these short-term, high-interest loans, which are often used by small businesses and individuals. The bank will now require borrowers to provide a larger down payment and more detailed financial statements before approving a loan.

By [Name]

The bank's new policy is part of a broader effort to strengthen its credit portfolio and ensure the stability of the financial system. The bank's management expects the new rules to result in a higher quality of loans and a lower rate of non-performing assets.

Napocor gets P700M for Muskan rehab

By Reynold S. Lina

THE NATIONAL POWER CORPORATION (Napocor) has secured a P700-million contract from the Department of Energy (DOE) to rehabilitate the Muskan hydroelectric project in the Cordillera region. The contract, awarded to a consortium led by the Philippine Electric Power Corporation (PEPCO), covers the rehabilitation of the project's infrastructure, including the dam, powerhouse, and transmission lines. The project is expected to be completed by the end of 2008.

Law granting extra pay to judiciary worries DOF

By Alexander I. Lopez

THE DEPARTMENT OF FINANCE (DOF) has expressed concern over a proposed law that would grant extra pay to members of the judiciary. The law, which is currently being debated in Congress, would provide a 10% increase in the salaries of judges and justices. The DOF is worried that this increase will lead to a corresponding increase in the salaries of other government employees, which could strain the national budget.

The DOF is also concerned that the law will set a precedent for other government agencies to demand similar increases. The department is currently working with the Congress to find a way to address the judiciary's concerns without increasing the overall cost of government operations.

Government picks underwriters for $500-M bond float

By Reynold S. Lina

THE GOVERNMENT has selected a group of underwriters to help it float a $500-million bond. The bonds will be used to fund various government projects and programs. The underwriters, which include several major financial institutions, will be responsible for selling the bonds to investors.

The government is looking for investors who are interested in the country's economic growth and development. The bonds are expected to be sold at a discount to their face value, which will allow the government to raise the necessary funds at a lower cost.

The government is also looking for investors who are interested in the country's infrastructure and public services. The bonds are expected to be sold to a wide range of investors, including foreign and domestic institutions.

Makeup inspired by colorful flowers and exotic fruits

I'VE BEEN spending the past few weekends arranging my first home-to-goodness out-of-town trip for summer '04—calling travel agencies, booking flights, finding the perfect resort—but I had yet to feel the summer vibe.

Maybe it was the stress of the near-impossible task of taking a trip on Holy Week or the unexpected rainy days that came mid-February, but I was feeling just about as dull as a cloudy sky—until I met Shu Uemura's Tina Tinto for lunch.

Next to take credit away from Tina's ability to turn something as ordinary and typical as a lunch date into a mini-party, of course, but I got my first genuine taste of summer in the goodies bag she had for me.

Colors as vibrant as the rainbow and shades yellower than popsicles and ice cream peeked from inside the bag and gave me a dose of summer cheer. Hello, paradise! Or should I say, Paradise?

Makeup maver Shu Uemura has managed to oudo himself yet again with his Spring-Summer Mode Makeup Collection for 2004. Aptly called Paradise, the collection features vivid hues balanced with sheer textures, all inspired by colorful tropical flowers and exotic fruits.

Gorgeous pinks, energy-infused oranges and cool blues complete that summer look. Yes, you can outshine the sun and turn into summer's muse with Paradise.

Luster Bronze Powder. If you wish to shimmer like a beach goddess, I suggest you bring this pot of golden bronze with you wherever you choose to head.

If basking on Boracay's shores is on your itinerary this summer, a fine dusting of this sheer powder will give that tan a golden edge. City dwellers who can't get as much sun need not fret, as this magic dust instantly warms up any skin tone without looking harsh or fake.

I especially like how it instantly defines shoulders when carefully applied on the area, and gives the illusion of, uh, major cleavage when brushed on your chest.

For toned and leather-looking gatts, mix a bit of the powder with a light lotion or body oil, and apply right down the center of each leg. Works like a charm—or at least, like two hours a day on the treadmill.

Pressed Eye Shadow.

I'm normally a beige shadow lover, but these eye shadows from the Paradise collection proved too gorgeous to resist.

Bold but not crayola-like, these four limited-edition shades are essential for brightening up any face. The effect you get is so striking, it doesn't take much to complete a makeup look with these colors on your lids.

Papaya (yellow) and Mango (orange) particularly complement warm complexions because these shades mirror the golden

He doesn't have time for her

DEAR Mark and Sep,

I have a boyfriend who is so busy and has really no time for me. We've been going steady for more than a month. But we always argue regarding his time for me.

I've tried my best to understand him. He's a salesman and right now, he's trying to apply for an overseas job so he can work again. I understand that he also needs to go back to his work after a long rest, but how about us? How can this relationship go on when we hardly see each other and seldom talk to one another?

When I call him or text him, he gets angry and says that I don't concentrate on my work. What should I do? Is it wrong to ask for a little time from him to pick me up at the office? Is it wrong to ask for some of his time?

MARTI

You have no choice but to accept the undeniable truths that he doesn't have time for you, and that he's not willing to at least squeeze you in his supposedly packed schedule.

It's not wrong to call or send "Daisy Sire" quotes to your lover's cell. It's not evil to want him to pick you up at work. It's not a sin to ask for some of his time.

What's wrong is he's ignoring you and shoving you away like some bothersome butterfly. What's wrong is you keep up with this busy bee and your quasi-relationship.

Face it: He will never have tick-tocks for you because you are not important to him. He will never have the hour to take you out and propose, the minute to make love with you or even the second to appreciate your strategically-positioned moles.

Your "relationship" will surely crumble once he hops back on the ship. I look into my crystal ball and I see nothing. Zero, nada, zip, zilch. No future for you guys.

So go out and look for someone who has

the time to understand and appreciate your calls and "Daisy Sire" quotes.

MARK

I was about to give a lecture on how you guys should be in tune already with each other's personalities until I realized that you've been on for just a little more than a month.

Do you know the guy whom you call your boyfriend?

As far as my limited knowledge in relationships can tell me, it should still be a "honeymoon stage" between you two—never enough time together, never enough love for phone calls and text messages, etcetera.

With your boyfriend's attitude, however, he's sounding like a guy who's been married for 10 years already (no offense to decade-long-happy-married people).

And that's not a good thing. With his line of work promising you less opportunities to be with him, you should start thinking about whether the relationship is worthy enough to be saved and to be worked on, when even the slightest request for affection becomes a critique of your work ethic and your personality in general.

Is it wrong to ask for a little bit of his time? Heck, no. You shouldn't even ask that question. The more important thing to ask is, does he love you? And are you willing to put up with the aggravation he's been giving you?

Look for the answers, and if you come up with a "No" to either or both questions, then it's time to look for someone who can love and appreciate you more.

undertones of tanned skin. Lotus (pink) and Palm (turquoise) are perfect for fair-skinned femmes who want to boost color on their pale faces.

Don't hesitate to experiment, though, as all four shades can be worn by everyone! For day, a layer on your peepers is enough to grab attention (Papaya and Mango are especially subtle). At night, be daring and mix and match shades, or layer them on for a more vivid effect.

Paradise Fluos. I was a huge fan of the Bon-bon Fluos when they first came out (they remain mainstays in my kit), and am currently obsessed with the limited-edition Paradise Fluos from Paradis.

These pots of versatile color can be worn on your eyes, cheeks and anywhere you want for an instant boost. Pink Hibiscus is even prettier than the flower and looks great on cheeks if you want the baby-doll look. Bird of Paradise (orange) defines cheekbones well—just use sparingly, especially if you're on the fair side.

Water Lily is just pure magic. Clean white with iridescent specks, this shade is best for highlighting the top of your cheekbones, the bridge of your nose, your brow bones and the inner corners of your eyes.

Again, when working with these Fluos, the possibilities are endless! Forget the rules and create your signature summer face.

Rouge 4 Lipstick. Lippie lovers have three new reasons to celebrate! The Rouge 4 pickings for Paradis are so wearable, it wouldn't take a trial-and-error session to pick the right shade for you.

Formulated especially for Asian skin tones, 321 (Salmon Pink), 351 (Reddish pink) and 335 (Rose pink) look pretty on any complexion. They blend well into the natural color of your lips, so you get the I-just-bit-my-lip effect and will never look overly made up.

Then again, that's what summer is about: fresh, effortless beauty. Just the thing you get from Paradis.

For candle lovers, there are also limited-edition floating candles in wonderful floral scents. Great for outdoor parties, luaus or those moments when you just want to lay back and relax.

Visit the Shu Uemura counters at Rustan's Makati and Rustan's Shangri-La Plaza. Shu's beauty consultants will be more than delighted to help you pick your best shades. Paradis is now available at the counters, so grab your own stash before stocks run out.
